

Mullardoch Raid walking

One of the great hill walking expeditions for spring / early summer in the Highlands is the traverse of the hills around Loch Mullardoch, when the ridges are fringed by lingering snow patches, and the scenery is just fantastic. This high level route will allow you to claim 12 Munros, some of which can otherwise be awkward to get at, by following the great ridges that surround the loch. There is some lumpy, bumpy terrain here and there, and a bit of clambering but nothing too scary. This is high mountain trekking at its best!

Please note: Backpacking and wild camping are required on this walking holiday.

What previous customers have said about the "Mullardoch Raid"

"Loved the low environmental impact of being in a small group exploring unspoilt remote areas of Scotland."

"A holiday with a real sense of adventure – loved the camping and backpacking and independence from transport and accommodation."

Fitness Levels

Due to the remote nature of the trip and lack of easy escape routes, participants should ensure that they have a high enough level of fitness to enable them to complete at least the linear parts of this holiday in full.

Although the distances are not long and we have all day to enjoy the route folk do have to have the ability to carry 30lbs or so on a daily basis - not impossible but some practice is advised. The terrain covered is mainly on paths and tracks, which may be rough, rocky and wet at times plus there is some un-pathed terrain.
