

Sutherland Trail walking

Starting at the picturesque port of Lochinver on the North West coast, and finishing at Tongue on the northern sea board, lies a 70 mile route of constant interest, variety of terrain and some degree of challenge.

Located largely within the North West Highlands Geopark area, it makes its way in between or close to many stunning mountains - Suilven, Canisp, Quinag, Ben Stack, Arkle, Foinaven and Ben Hope, and ends within sight of Ben Loyal, the most shapely of them all.

It follows ancient ways used since time immemorial much of the time, but there are a few miles of wild untamed terrain. In addition pleasant stretches of quiet country roads allow you to almost switch the brains to your feet off for a while.

The area is really good for wildlife and flowers, and the scenery is without compare. This is definitely 'get up and get there' territory!
